INSIDE:
Wartburg
travels the world

From a global perspective

In August, when the Iraqi army invaded Kuwait, we were in the midst of a Wartburg summer term course, World Religions in Dialogue. In fact, we were studying Islam and the relation of religion and politics in the Middle East. That made for some interesting class discussions, especially since four class members were Muslim students—from Palestine to Pakistan, from Bahrain in the Persian Gulf, and even one who had lived in Baghdad, where his father had been a diplomat. Whenever the classroom started to heat up and the noise level reached a roar, we could count on an African or Indian student to enter in, providing an even different perspective on the issue.

Lively and interesting discussions are just one of the benefits of Wartburg's global emphasis and an international population of more than 100 students from 24 countries. It is one thing to study Hinduism or Buddhism through a text. It is quite another to talk face to face.

I wonder how often discussion is carried over to everyday campus life—a simple thing like a meal in the cafeteria, where one student cuts into a slice of beef while another chooses a vegetarian diet and another fasts because it is Ramadan. We start asking basic questions like "Who am I?" and "Why do I believe the way I do?" That's global education. The world comes to Wartburg.

Wartburg also goes to the world. Junior Year Abroad, Venture Education, music tours to Europe and May Term travel are just a few pieces of Wartburg's global picture.

A few months ago, 27 students and I were busy fitting together pieces—pieces of ancient pottery from the Biblical site of Bethsaida on the northern edge of the Sea of Galilee, when we dug up a first-century water jug intact.

There is something indescribable about the excitement of discovery—that moment when history comes alive. As I looked out over the Galilean landscape, smelled the fragrance of the lilies of the field, felt the hot middle-eastern sun burn my head, tasted the humus and pita flavors in my mouth from breakfast and listened to the Hebrew words from my excited Israeli colleague, I marveled at this educational experience for my students. They will never again read the Gospels in quite the same way.

One further thought entered my mind at that moment: I can't wait to get back in the classroom to talk about this.

May Term in Greece

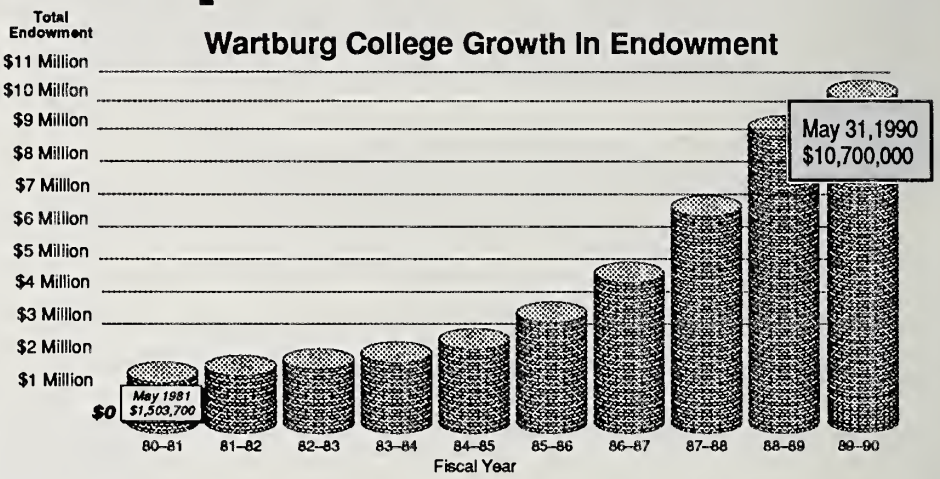
Endowment tops $10 million



Wartburg's endowment went over the $10 million mark in fiscal 1989-90, capping 15 years of significant growth. On May 31, endowment funds stood at $10.7 million, a nearly 12-fold increase from the 1975 total of $863,000. The past year was particularly productive, adding approximately $1.7 million.

"We are happy, of course, to pass the $10 million mark," President Robert Vogel said. "Ten years ago that seemed like a far-away dream, and we want to thank all who have helped Wartburg achieve this significant milestone."

Vogel said the second $10 million should come more easily, in part because the endowment begins building upon itself. Except for student scholarships, the Board of Regents has set a cap of 5 percent on the spending rate of endowment earnings. Since total return for the past fiscal year was just over 11 percent, a significant amount of the earnings remained with the endowment to add to its principal.

However, Vogel pointed out that $10 million is hardly adequate for Wartburg's future needs.

"Right now, we should have at least a $30 million endowment," he said. "Many experts suggest that the best schools 10 years from now will be those with $100 million endowments or more. That goal is no less attainable than it was for us to increase our endowment by more than 10 times in the past decade and a half."

Vogel said the college is already beginning to see some positive results from its long-range plan through the financial commitments of alumni, parents and friends.

"There is strong support for the endowment goals in the plan," he said. "These are the funds that support and enrich the academic program and provide student scholarships."

Vogel said the college hopes to secure additional funds to endow library acquisitions and the purchase of fine art for the campus and to support the Artist Series and convocation series. The long-range plan calls for five more endowed faculty chairs and professorships, including religion and education.

Dr. Ronald Matthias, vice president for administration and finance, also emphasized the importance of continued growth in the endowment.

"We need to realize more income from the endowment so that Wartburg becomes less dependent upon student tuition," he said.

Kresge grant boosts Fine Arts

A $300,000 challenge grant by The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Mich., will assist with the funding of Wartburg's new Fine Arts Center.

The grant is contingent upon the college raising the money necessary to complete funding of the $4.25 million project by Jan. 1, 1991.

"The grant is a timely boost to the college in its efforts to finance the Fine Arts Center," said Harry G. Slife, chair of the college's Board of Regents. "Kresge grants are very competitive, so to receive a gift of this magnitude is a strong confirmation of the good things that are happening at the college."

President Robert Vogel said the college is approaching individual and corporate donors for major gifts. Alumni and friends of the college with special interest in the fine arts are being contacted for their support of the project this fall.

Construction is under way on the Fine Arts Center with completion slated in August 1991.

The center, which will occupy 42,000 square feet, will provide facilities for music, music therapy and art. The present Art Building has been razed, and once the new building is finished, the current Liemohn Hall of Music will be converted into a facility for communication arts.

The Kresge Foundation is an independent, private foundation created by the personal gifts of Sebastian S. Kresge and is not affiliated with any corporation or organization.

It makes grants toward projects involving construction or renovation of facilities and the purchase of equipment or real estate.

This is the largest grant made by The Kresge Foundation to Wartburg. The Foundation awarded two $150,000 grants, one to the Physical Education Center in 1977 and the other to the Whitehouse Business Center in 1982. It made a $25,000 grant to Engelbrecht Library in 1971.

Building strikes new chord for fine arts at Wartburg

The arched windows on Wartburg's new Fine Arts Center are already visible in the most recent photo of the project, above. Views at left show progress on the building from the initial excavation last March through the pouring of the foundation and the erection of walls. The $4.25 million project is connected to Liemohn Hall of Music, shown in the background on the third picture, and will provide facilities for music, music therapy and art. Liemohn Hall will be converted to a facilty for communication arts once the new building is finished. The bottom photo was taken from where the Art Building once stood. Art classes are meeting in Players Theatre during the 1990-91 academic year. Completion of the Fine Arts Center is targeted for Fall 1991.

Twelve new members join faculty

Twelve new faculty members joined the Wartburg faculty for the 1990-91 year.

Among the new faculty members is Grant Price, whose appointment was announced in the Spring 1990 issue of the Wartburg Magazine. Price, retired vice president for news and public affairs at KWWL-TV in Waterloo, is serving as Executive in Residence in the communication arts department.

Three of the faculty members are filling new positions, including Dr. Heimir Geirsson, Dr. Peggy Tilgner, and Susan Kay Sherwood.

Assistant Professor in Physics

Clark spent the summer completing his Ph.D. degree in plasma physics at the University of Iowa. He earned his undergraduate degree at Brigham Young University in 1981 and his M.S. degree at Iowa in 1984.

Assistant Professor of Political Science

Billet taught at Miami University of Ohio and the University of Cincinnati last year after earning his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at Miami. He is the author of a book, Direct Foreign Investment Behavior of Multinational Corporations in Developing Countries, which is being published this year by Transaction Books. He is a 1984 graduate of Manchester College in Indiana and has studied in Mexico and West Africa.

Dr. Heimir Geirsson

Assistant Professor of Philosophy

Geirsson last year was a visiting professor of philosophy at the University of Nebraska-Omaha. He previously was a lecturer in philosophy at the University of Wisconsin-Washington County for a year after earning his doctorate at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1988. He earned his B.Ed. degree at Icelandic National Teachers College and his B.A. degree at the University of Iceland. His M.A. degree also is from Nebraska.

Kathy Mae Brackemyer

Assistant Professor of Math and Computer Science

Brackemyer has taught mathematics at the University of Northern Iowa for the past two years. She previously taught at Murray Community School and Vinton Community School in Iowa for 12 years. She is a 1976 graduate of Central College in Iowa and has an M.A. degree from UNI. She assumes the responsibilities of Josef Breutzmann, who is on sabbatical.

Vicki Edelnant

Instructor in English/ Communication Arts

Edelnant has been an adjunct instructor at UNI since 1983. At Wartburg, she will share responsibilities in communication arts with Grant Price and also teach some courses in English. Prior to accepting her position at UNI, she taught in three Iowa school systems and at Hawkeye Institute of Technology in Waterloo, Iowa. She earned both her B.A. and M.A. degrees at UNI.

Daniel Gast

Visiting Professor of Music

Gast was a voice instructor and assistant director of the opera workshop at Grinnell College while completing his M.A. degree at the University of Iowa. He has extensive performing experience in opera and as a soloist with orchestras. He taught voice and piano privately for six years before returning to graduate school. He is a 1982 graduate of Bethel College, St. Paul, Minn.

Susan Kay Sherwood

Instructor in Education

Sherwood was on the Wartburg faculty during last Winter Term when she filled in while Phyllis Schmidt of the education department was on leave in Africa. She has 18 years of elementary teaching experience and twice served as an instructor at UNI. Last year, she was the recipient of "The Gold Star Award for Outstanding Teaching" from the McElroy Trust of Waterloo, Iowa. In 1988, she received the "Elementary Mathematics Teaching Award for Excellence" from the Iowa Council of Teachers of Mathematics. She earned her B.A. and M.A. degrees at UNI and is projected to receive her Ed.D. degree there in 1991.

Dr. William A. Slough

Assistant Professor of Math and Computer Science

Slough has been teaching at the University of Missouri-Columbia since earning his doctorate at Washington State University in 1984. He previously taught at Washington State and the University of Wisconsin-Parkside. He earned his B.A. and M.S. degrees at San Jose State University in California.

Dr. Peggy J. Tilgner

Assistant Professor of Biology

Tilgner has been at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln since 1987, teaching and completing her M. Ed. and Ed.D. degrees, the latter this year. Previously, she taught in secondary schools in Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa and at Fairbury Junior College in Nebraska. She is a 1971 graduate of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Dr. Pierre X. Yang

Visiting Professor of English

Yang, a native of China, has been a visiting professor of English at the University of Northern Arizona. He taught at Shanghai International Studies University for 37 years, and he continues to be the chair emeritus of its English department. He has considerable experience as a translator from English to Chinese and has been involved in China's electronic media as a teacher of English. He replaces Dr. Fusheng Yao, also a native of China, who taught English at Wartburg for two years before resigning.

Robin Baker

Instructor in Physical Education

Baker is head volleyball and softball coach and manager of the Physical Education Center. More information about her is found in the Sports section of this issue.

Wrestling coach killed in Sept. 10 auto accident

Dr. Richard Walker, Wartburg's wrestling coach since 1968, died instantly in a two-car accident north of Waverly on the evening of Sept.10. In addition to his wrestling responsibilities, he was chair of the physical education department and coordinator of activities for the Wartburg Booster Club.

During his 22 seasons of coaching, he compiled a 180-93-4 dual meet record, won Iowa Conference championships in 1974, 1976, 1977 and 1978 and was named IIAC Coach-of-the-Year in 1974, 1981 and 1987. He was a former chair of the Wrestling Sports Committee for Division III of the NCAA and a member of the NCAA Wrestling Rules Committee.

He is survived by his wife, Shirley, his four children, Matthew '84, Ann, Amy and Steven, who is completing his degree at Wartburg, his father, Lowell, and his brother, Charles.

Memorials can be directed to Trinity United Methodist Church in Waverly or to Wartburg College.

An edited version of the tribute written and delivered by President Robert Vogel during the Sept. 14 funeral service in Neumann Auditorium appears on page 23.

Christmas With Wartburg

Lo, the Marvel of this Night

This year's Christmas With Wartburg performances are scheduled Nov. 29-Dec. 2 in Waverly, Cedar Falls and Des Moines.

Campus performances will be Thursday, Nov. 29, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 2, at 3 p.m, in Neumann Auditorium. The Christmas Carol Dinner, featuring entertainment by ensembles from the Wartburg Choir, will begin at 4:30 p.m. in the Student Union, following the Sunday matinee.

The Cedar Falls performance is Friday, Nov. 30, at 8 p.m. in Nazareth Lutheran Church, and the Des Moines production will be Saturday, Dec. 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the Civic Center.

Theme for this year's production is "Lo, the Marvel of this Night." Narration and music will emphasize the sense of wonder, the marvel of Christ's birth. Performing groups include the Wartburg Choir, Band and Castle Singers under the combined direction of Dr. Robert E. Lee and Dr. Paul Torkelson.

Last year, more than 6,000 people viewed the live performances, including approximately 2,400 at the Des Moines Civic Center. In addition, the rest of the state was able to watch Christmas With Wartburg on Iowa Public Television.

Iowa Public Television will rebroadcast the 1989 production during the Christmas season, but the dates have not yet been determined.

Nov. 29, Dec. 2—Waverly
Nov. 30—Cedar Falls
Dec. 1—Des Moines

As in the past, there is no admission charge, but those attending are asked to pick up envelope tickets through the Visitors Center (319) 352-8286. Ticket envelopes will be available Nov. 1. Calls should not be made prior to that date. Ticket information for the Christmas Carol Dinner also may be obtained through the Visitors Center.

Faculty Notes

ARTHUR FRICK, art, had a one-person exhibition of paintings at the Dean Whitter Reynolds Gallery in Minneapolis.

JAIME GOMEZ, Spanish, presented a paper on the Latin American novel at the Kentucky Language Conference.

LOIS LINDELL, economics, was a panelist for a session on the "Internationalization of the Principles of Economics Courses" at Western Illinois University's annual economics conference.

Dr. TED REUTER, music, was guest recitalist and clinician for the Lewis-Clark State College annual piano concert and workshop in Lewiston, Idaho.

Dr. MARK SCHMIDT, chemistry, presented a paper on the "Synthesis of Oxidative Chemistry of Ruthenium Thiolate Complexes" at a conference on research in chemistry in Iowa sponsored by the Iowa and Ames Sections of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. EDITH WALDSTEIN, humanities, is the author of an article entitled "Identity as Conflict and Conversation in Rahel Vernhagen (1771-1833)," published in Out of Line/"Ausgefallen:" The Paradox of Marginality in the Writings of Nineteenth-Century German Women. She also presented a paper on contemporary Austrian writer Klaus Hoffer at the Tenth St. Louis Symposium on German Literature.

Dr. FREDRIC WALDSTEIN, political science, has published "Cabinet Government: The Reagan Management Model" in Joseph Hogan's (ed.) The Reagan Years: The Record in Presidential Leadership, Manchester University Press.

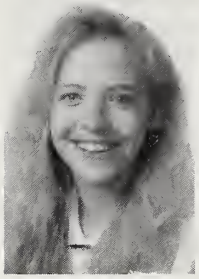
Dr. WARREN ZEMKE, chemistry, is co-author of a review paper entitled "Spectroscopy of the Alkali Hydride Diatomic Molecules and Their Ions," to be published in the Journal of Physical and Chemical Reference Data. A test unit on general chemistry developed by Zemke will become part of the physical sciences portion of the new 1990 Medical College Admissions Test.

New faces in Admissions Office

The Wartburg admissions department has taken on an almost completely new look with the appointment of a new director and four new counselors.



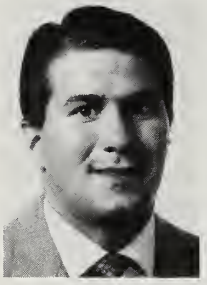
Katko-Roquet

Deanndrea Katko-Roquet, director of the Annual Fund for the past year, is the new director, replacing Jay Nugent, who resigned to continue postgraduate study.

Katko-Roquet joined the Wartburg staff as an admissions counselor in 1986 and was promoted to assistant director a year later. She held that position for two years until moving to the development department to lead the Annual Fund.

She is a 1986 graduate of Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa, and a 1989 graduate of Project LEAD, a community leadership program.

New counselors are Brian Bowman '89 of St. Paul, Minn., Stacy Fricke '88 of Ames, Iowa, Jennifer Paar of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Kori Stoffregen '89, of Jesup, Iowa.



B. Bowman

Three others in the department received promotions Sept. 1. Renae Schroeder '87 was named assistant director after two years as a counselor; Doug Bowman '86 was promoted from assistant director to associate director; and Jerome Rowan was named assistant director of minority recruiting after one year as a counselor.

Brian Bowman, a brother to Doug, has been a claims representative for National Car Rental in Edina, Minn.

Fricke

Fricke has been with the Younkers Department Stores in Des Moines and Ames, most recently as an assistant manager of operations and personnel. Stoffregen has been a substitute teacher in seven Northeast Iowa schools, in addition to being head boys varsity track coach and an assistant coach in cross country and baseball at Jesup, Iowa, High School. Paar is a 1990 graduate of Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where she was an admissions and financial aid assistant as a student.

Stoffregen

Paar

Regents elect two women

Two Illinois women have been elected to the Wartburg Board of Regents, according to President Robert L. Vogel.

They are Agaliece W. Miller of Chicago and Lynne W. Shotwell of Glenview.

Miller is associate director of the Office for Personnel for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and Shotwell is on the women's board of the North Shore Country Day School in Winnetka, Ill.

Miller

Shotwell

Miller accepted her present position in 1986. She previously spent seven years with the Chicago Defender newspaper, where she was associate editor of the women's news and the Bud Billiken Page for children, and 45 years as a career employee of the State of Illinois in the Department of Employment Security, eventually becoming its director.

She has been cited by the National Governor's Association, the Illinois Department of Labor, the National Association for Negro Business and Professional Women, the American Legion, the Academy of Science in Taiwan, Augustana Hospital and the Illinois Department of Employment Security.

Miller served on the boards of the Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies, the Illinois Employment Security Advisory Board, Salem House Community Center, Salem Lutheran Church, Augustana Hospital and Health Care System, Lutheran Social Services of Illinois, the Governor's Council on Literacy and the United Way of Chicago.

She did her undergraduate work at Northwestern University and has an honorary degree in the humanities from Arkansas Baptist College.

Shotwell, who has been on the women's board of the North Shore Country Day School since 1982, served as its executive vice president from 1986 to 1988.

She also has served on the boards of the auxiliary of the Evanston and Glenbrook hospitals, the women's association of the Glenview Community Church, the Glenview Library Association and the Parents-Teachers Association.

She is a graduate of Colby Sawyer College and attended the Arizona State University school of architecture.

Public health education program offered through South Florida

Wartburg will become the only college in Iowa to offer an accelerated entry program in public health education under a new affiliation between the biology department and the University of South Florida—Tampa campus.

According to Dr. Darold Wolff, chair of Wartburg's biology department, the affiliation with the Public Education program in the Department of Community and Family Health at South Florida will lead to a master's degree in public health education. Students will spend the first three years at Wartburg and the final two to two-and-a-half years at South Florida. They will receive a bachelor's degree from Wartburg at the conclusion of their fourth year. Successful completion of the entire program results in a master's degree from South Florida.

Wolff said students entering the program need not be biology majors, but they must have a strong biology background.

Dr. Stanley Graven '53 heads the public health education program at South Florida and was a key factor in enrolling the college.

Wolff said the South Florida program is unique in that it offers excellent opportunity for field experience in public health education. For example, he noted that in the Tampa area, approximately 8 percent of all babies born are premature and underweight. Of that 8 percent, some 11 percent die.

The program is designed to prepare professional health educators to develop and manage programs that focus on health promotion, disease prevention and methods for providing care to targeted populations, such as pregnant teenagers, infants and the elderly.

Major research areas include school health education, community health education, patient education, employee health education, health program marketing, health education in developing countries, AIDS education, prenatal education, substance abuse and other areas.

The program emphasizes a multidisciplinary approach to the efficient utilization of health services, adoption of self-care practices and promotion of healthier lifestyles.

Wolff said a major reason Wartburg affiliated with the program is student interest. Career opportunities are available in hospitals and ambulatory care settings, health maintenance organizations, voluntary health agencies, public and private school systems, colleges and universities, local and state health agencies, private industry and international health organizations.

Social work reaccredited

The Council on Social Work Education has reaffirmed the accreditation of the Wartburg social work department for the regular seven-year cycle to February 1997.

Wartburg's social work program is the oldest undergraduate program in the state. It was established by then-president C. H. Becker in 1945, first accredited in 1976 and reaccredited in 1982. This is the third time that department chair D.D. Starr has gone through the accreditation process.

Approximately 225 social work majors have graduated since the program was first accredited in 1976, including 18 this year.

Currently, 65 majors are in the program, and they have an active, student-operated Social Work Club. Last year, it became the Alpha Sigma chapter of the national Phi Alpha honorary society for social work majors.

In addition to Starr, the social work faculty includes Barry Mickey, associate professor of social work, and Susan Vallem, assistant professor of social work. All three have MSW degrees.

Enrollment again tops 1,400

Wartburg's 1990 fall enrollment topped 1,400 for the second consecutive year. According to figures from the registrar's office, Fall Term enrollment is 1,440, down 16 from last year's all-time record of 1,456.

The college's 1990 freshman class of 371 is the second largest since 1984, but down 19 from the 390 freshmen who enrolled in 1989. Fifty-four students transferred to Wartburg this fall, compared with 89 in 1989.

A total of 907 students returned this year, an increase of 35 from 1989, helping offset the smaller number of new students and transfers. Wartburg's retention rate was 86 percent.

Enrollment figures also show an increase in minority and international students. A total of 34 minority and 104 international students enrolled this fall, compared with 29 and 91 in 1989. The international students come from 24 countries.

Wartburg's enrollment includes students from 26 states with the largest number, 1,070 or 74 percent, coming from Iowa.

Peterson's guide cites Wartburg

For the sixth consecutive year, Wartburg is included in the current edition of Peterson's Competitive Colleges, which is published by Peterson's, the Princeton, N.J., publisher of education and career reference materials.

Designed for college-bound students, the guide provides objective information on the nation's 300-plus colleges and universities that consistently attract and accept the brightest students.

Newsweek writer on convo series

An address on the recent revolution in Eastern Europe and the Soviet bloc countries by Andrew Nagorski, a former Bonn-Eastern Europe bureau chief for Newsweek magazine, was one of the highlights of Wartburg's Fall Term convocation series.

Now a Washington-based correspondent for Newsweek, Nagorski spoke on Thursday, Oct. 25. This past year, he was on leave from the magazine serving as a senior associate with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

He has been with Newsweek since 1973, spending the first five years in New York writing and editing, then serving in Hong Kong, Moscow, where he was expelled in 1982, and Rome before accepting the Bonn-Eastern Europe assignment.

He is the author of a book, Reluctant Farewell: An American's Candid Look Inside the Soviet Union. He has won a number of awards for his reporting, including the Overseas Press Club award for best business reporting from abroad and an Overseas Press Club citation for his cover story on "Black Africa Moves South."

Remaining programs on the convocation schedule include:

Nov. 15—Dr. Marit Nilsen-Hamilton, associate professor of biochemistry and biophysics at Iowa State University, speaks on "Life with Growth Factors."

Nov. 20—The Rev. John Steinbruck of the Lutheran Volunteer Corps in Washington, D.C., presents a pre-Thanksgiving convocation on the homeless, a group of people he has had extensive experience with at Luther Place Church.

Nov. 29—Dr. Phyllis Anderson, director for theological education in the Division of Ministry of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, addresses the theme of women clergy to help commemorate the 20th anniversary of the ordination of women in the Lutheran church.

Dec. 6—Dan Buettner, who led a team of two Soviet and two American cyclists on a expedition across the United States and the Soviet Union earlier this year, presents a multimedia lecture on the 11,000 mile ride, which traversed Rumania, the Baltic states, Siberia and a number of other previously closed regions of the USSR.

Earlier Fall Term convocations covered such topics as Native American culture with Native American artist Bill Miller; "Leadership and the Renewal of Public Life: The Challenge for the 1990s" by Harry C. Boyte, senior fellow at the University of Minnesota's Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs; and Dr. Antonioni's Imaginary Disease, a one-man play about medical conspiracies by Mike Chappell of Denver, Colo.

David McNally, president of the Trans-Form Corporation, a consulting firm, discussed strategic planning and goal setting as part of Corporation Education Day on Oct. 11.

Convocations begin at 9:30 a.m. in Neumann Auditorium.

Staff changes, additions announced

Four staff changes were made at Wartburg prior to the beginning of the 1990-91 academic year, and two other administrative staff members assumed additional responsibilities.

New members of the staff include T. Todd Masman, director of student activities; Charlene Tjaden '62, assistant director of residential life; Charles Leohr '90, assistant operations manager of the Computer Center; and the Revs. Brian and Susan Burchfield, interim co-directors of the Wartburg West program in Denver, Colo.

Adding to their job descriptions were Janet L. Striepe '59, who is now director of parent relations as well as alumni relations, and Tom Thomsen, who is an advancement associate in the development department as well as director of financial aid.

Masman, prior to joining the Wartburg staff, was assistant dean of students and director of student activities at Tiffin University in Ohio. He earned his M.A. degree earlier this year at Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

Tjaden, who had been a residence hall director at St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn., for the past three years, will assist Cynthia Jacobson, director of residential life, in initiating, implementing, maintaining and evaluating a total residential life program. She also will have responsibility for a residential hall area.

She completed an M.S. degree in continuing education at Mankato State University last spring.

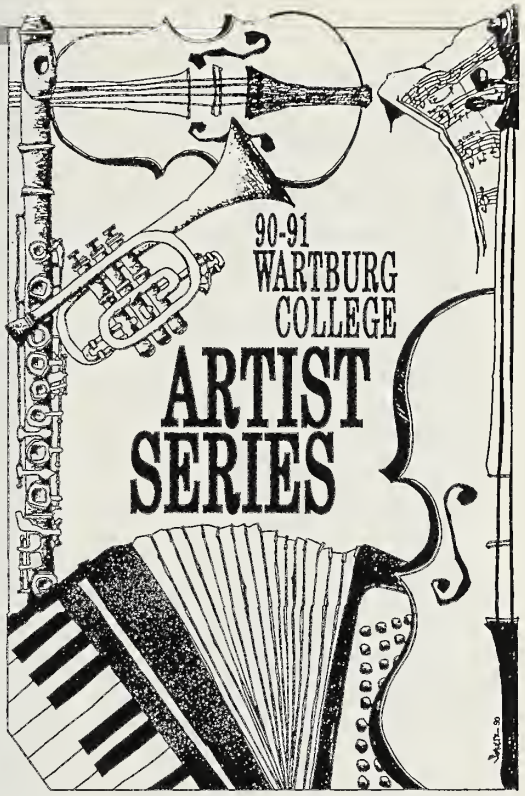
Leohr graduated from Wartburg with majors in computer science and physics. As an undergraduate, he spent four years as a student assistant in Computer Operations.

The Burchfields, pastors at American Lutheran Memorial Church in Denver, replace Elaine Olson as co-directors of Wartburg West, which began its sixth year of operation this fall. Approximately 90 students have gone through the program, taking courses and spending about 30 hours a week in an internship in a pluralistic urban setting.

The Rev. Brian Burchfield had previous experience with Wartburg West, teaching a course in Christian Ethics during the Winter Terms of 1989 and 1990.

Both of the Burchfields are graduates of Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Wash., and earned their M. Div. degrees at Wartburg Theological Seminary in Dubuque, Iowa.

Artist Series celebrates 70th anniversary season



Wartburg's 70th Artist Series season offers something for every musical taste. The series opened on Oct. 4 with the Classic Buskers, a zany musical duo, playing arrangements and de-arrangements of the classics on accordion and woodwinds. A symphony orchestra, a jazz quartet and a Broadway musical complete the 1990-91 program. Tickets are available by calling 319-352-8286.

SHANGHAI SYMPHONY

Saturday, Oct. 27

Hou Ronyu, deputy music director and resident conductor of the Shanghai Symphony Orchestra, leads its fall American tour. "Sister" to the Tokyo Symphony Orchestra, it is the oldest professional group of its kind in China and the second Chinese orchestra to tour the United States.

The full orchestra of triple woodwinds and brass has nearly 100 players and several conductors. This fall's tour includes concerts at New York's Carnegie Hall and Milwaukee's Orchestra Hall, as well as Neumann Auditorium.

The Wartburg concert will include Rachmaninoff's Symphony No 2 in E minor, Op. 27, Berlioz' Le Carnaval Romain, Op. 9 and Chen Gang's Concerto for Erhu and Orchestra, featuring Jiang Jian-hua as soloist on the erhu, a two-stringed bowed lute.

FREE FLIGHT

Thursday, Jan. 31

This quartet was founded by flautist Jim Walker as a jazz outlet from his career as principal flautist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, and its sound reflects the eclecticism of that background. Each composition blends together flavors of classical, jazz, new age and rock.

"Free Flight's sound has turned jazz fans into classical buffs and classical audiences toward jazz," according to its publicity materials.

The group has had a half-dozen spots on "The Tonight Show" and has performed at Lincoln Center, the Hollywood Bowl and across the United States.

OIL CITY SYMPHONY

Monday, March 11

Oil City Symphony, from the creators of Pump Boys & Dinettes, reunites four musically inclined Oil City High School graduates of the 1960s for a recital in honor of a favorite teacher.

About half the songs are oldies, including "easy listening" anthologies, while the rest are imitations by the company. The musical has been described as "more cabaret than theater" and runs only about 80 minutes.

Mel Gussow of the New York Times said in his review of the 1988 winner of the Outer Critics Circle Award and the Drama Desk Award, "No matter where one went to high school, Oil City Symphony should stir affectionate memories. A musical with charm."

'Music, Magic and the Maestro' theme of Symphony season

"Music, Magic and the Maestro" is the theme of this year's Wartburg Community Symphony Orchestra season. All three elements were present in the group's first concert on Sept. 23, which featured music by the symphony, magic by magician Mark Pittman of Cedar Falls, Iowa, and Maestro Janice Wade, who is in her fourth year as musical director and conductor.

Other programs for the year will be presented in Neumann Auditorium and include :

- "Russian Wizardry," Sunday, Oct. 28, at 7:30 p.m., presenting an all-Russian program with piano soloist George Katz, winner of the prestigious Naumberg and Viotti prizes.
- "Conjure Up a Christmas," Saturday, Dec. 8, at 2 p.m., featuring a program based on Charles Dickens' "The Christmas Tree" and narrated by Wartburg president Robert Vogel.
- "Before Your Very Eyes," Sunday, Feb. 10, at 3 p.m. , showcasing winners of the symphony's young artists competition.
- "It's Sheer Magic," Sunday, April 14, at 3 p.m., featuring the symphony orchestra and a community chorus performing Mozart's Requiem.

Symphony memberships are available at $15 for individuals, $25 for families, $50 for patrons, $75 for sustaining members and $100 for guarantors. Membership information is available by calling 319-352-8286. Single tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students.

"Going to Mexico is like going to Japan. Going to Europe is like going to Illinois."

We chuckle at Art Frick's remark, made in early days of the first Wartburg faculty development seminar in Mexico. But before the two-week trip is over, we understand the truth in it.

The Mendoza family share the story of their lives and hopes with Wartburg visitors. Pictured are Marcelino Mendoza, his wife Amada Nunoz, and daughters, Blanco Estella, 9, Marie Guadalupe, 3, and Ernestina, 6. Son Daniel, 2 months, is asleep nearby. Marcelino makes $30 -$35 a week as a laborer and often stays all night at the worksite to avoid a commute that can stretch his workdays to 15 hours.

A REASONABLE DEGREE OF APPREHENSION

by Mary-Claire Uselding

Ten Wartburg faculty and staff members take off from the Des Moines airport on Saturday, Feb. 24, 1990, in bitter cold. We arrive seven hours later to shirtsleeve weather in Mexico City.

Peggy Cain '80, who has made a special trip from Guatemala to be our facilitator, meets us at the airport, along with Erika Smith, a graduate student from the University of Wisconsin in Madison. Both work in programs of the Center for Global Education affiliated with Augsburg College in Minneapolis.

Under Erika's watchful eye, we take several subway lines, a bus ride and a substantial hike for the 35-mile trip from Mexico City to Casa Augsburg in Cuernavaca, where we'll be spending our first week.

Why have we come? Augie Waltmann, who takes an active interest in Wartburg international students, simply wants to become more globally aware; Terry Lindell hopes to gain insights into U.S. foreign policy from Mexico's point of view; Les Huth is looking for valuable field experiences for Wartburg education majors; I want to help make the seminar experience come alive for the people back home.

Darold Wolff has questions about public health; Mel Kramer hopes to broaden and deepen the understanding he gained on a previous trip to Mexico; Larry Trachte expects to learn firsthand about base Christian communities and Mexican attitudes toward death.

D.D. Starr asks how the government deals with the vast poverty; Art Frick wants to know what accounts for the demise of revolutionary art; Kim Folkers wonders how multinationals can operate ethically abroad.

We waste no time starting to explore the answers as we hear a riveting lecture by Dr. Ross Gandy, a North American teaching at the Autonomous National University of Mexico. In less than two hours, he takes us through the last 80 years of Mexico's history.

We learn that Mexico has been ruled by the same political party since the 1920s, that the government is riddled with corruption and that the land is rich in mineral resources but poor in arable acres.

Gandy explains that Mexico has been in a state of severe economic crisis since 1982, that 70 percent of the population pays 87 percent of its income for food and that 60 percent of the economically-active have no steady employment.

We're told that four million people in Mexico City have no toilets or outhouses, and that one reason the government has no money for social services is because it's paying off a huge foreign debt.

We go to bed.

The next day, our learning proceeds at the same fast pace, in a steady progression of talks and site visits. Anyone who thought this was going to be a "junket" would have been quickly disabused.

We attend Sunday mass in a poor parish, where priest and people welcome us warmly. They pray for each other and for their brothers and sisters in Nicaragua, whom they see as victims of a 10-year war waged from the United States. They pray for us.

We visit Marcelino Mendoza, his wife, Amada Nunoz, and their four children in a neighborhood of 5,000 people living in one-room shacks along the railroad right-of-way outside Cuernavaca Station.

The baby, Daniel, nestled in a rope hammock slung above his parent's bed, coughs from the smoke of the indoor open cooking fire.

The days pass in a kaleidoscope of new sounds, new sights and new ideas.

We listen to advocates of liberation theology, who applaud its "preferential option for the poor" and its insistence on the link between faith and action. We hear from critics, who deplore what they consider to be its Marxist methodology.

Heladio and Onesima Reyes relate how they farm 10 acres with two oxen and a single-bladed plow and support 13 people on the income. The government is soon to take another strip of their land to widen the road to Acapulco. Onesima imagines problems must be similar the world over.

We bargain clumsily in the crowded markets for beautiful artifacts for which we'd have happily paid three times the price back home.

We take part in a meeting of a base Christian community, a "house church" where people gather to reflect on their value in the eyes of God and then decide on actions to improve dehumanizing conditions.

We visit indigenous people who are fighting the government over their ancient water rights. We hear a speech from a representative of the PRI, the party that has ruled Mexico since the end of the revolution, providing relative political stability but squelching dissent.

By the end of week one, we've found at least some answers to our questions—and some new questions. Trachte speaks for many when he says, "I'm struck with the complexity of the issues here. I'm struggling with my own limited vision."

Kramer has warned us that everything we've experienced in Cuernavaca, the exciting and inspiring as well as the depressing, will be true of Mexico City—only more so. How right he is.

The Rev. James and Mrs. (Jim and Gladdy) Peterson, who direct travel seminars and international dialogues at The Lutheran Center in Mexico City, welcome us to the former seminary for our second week.

Urging us to remain open to new experiences, Jim quotes a favorite author, Gerhardt Frost, "Wherever you are, be sure to unpack."

The glory and grandeur of Mexico City make "unpacking" easy at first. It's a little unusual taking in the ballet at 9:30 on a Sunday morning, but we're enchanted by the costumes, music, movement and the magnificent Palacio de Bellas Artes.

We spend an afternoon at the world-famous Museum of Anthropology, marveling at pre-Hispanic cultures—societies sophisticated in mathematics, astronomy, metallurgy and commerce—that flourished here while Europe slumbered in the Dark Ages.

We drive to the pyramids of Teotihuacan, old when the Aztecs first soldiered into the Mexican highlands, and explore excavated portions of the Aztec city of Tenochtitlan, buried under the heart of downtown Mexico City.

Lectures on contemporary Mexican literature, art and public policy at El Colegio de Mexico, together with a custom-tailored tour of the Museum of Modern Art, fill an entire day.

Overwhelming poverty and misery, not to mention severe air and water pollution, are never far from view. But it's a hopeful and humbling sign that some of Mexico City's more privileged realize that for them, too, faith must be connected with life, with the problems of the world.

Peggy Cain points out the carving of the plumed serpent on the pyramids at Xochicalco to Augie Waltmann, Larry Trachte, Les Huth, Kim Folkers, D.D. Starr, Mel Kramer and Terry Lindell.

Terry Lindell, Kim Folkers and Mel Kramer listen to a presentation in the classroom of Casa Augsburg in Cuernavaca.

Dr. Jose Alcantara, a professor at Ibero-American University, has recently founded the Mexican Association for Rural and Urban Transformation—its Spanish acronym is AMEXTRA. The organization was born after he experienced the unsettling realization that the poor have as much to offer to the solution of their problems as the professionals.

Today, doctors, dentists, catechists, residents of the marginalized neighborhood of Tlalpizahuac and others work together to transform their lives and recognize the talents that each brings to the enterprise.

One tangible result of their work is a community center, built partly by neighborhood residents, that will offer medical and dental care, nutrition education, Bible study, a gardening experiment and child care. Already in regular use, although unfinished, its construction has been supported by the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

We pack up and arrive back home with more thoughts than we can express. Many stories and impressions begin to find their way, nevertheless, into Wartburg classes on international business, U.S. foreign policy, women's studies, biology and more.

Frick, for example, is convinced that every student can learn much from Mexican art. "It deals with a sense of the primordial self," he says. "We can get from it a sense of firsthand, unmediated experience, a powerful sense of the human struggle."

The very intensity of that struggle is making many of us uncomfortable. It's arrogant to assume that our familiar structures for dealing with social issues, products of our unique history, are right for other countries.

Then what is our role—as U.S. citizens, as college teachers, as believers—in the struggle for decency and justice in this world? Would the models of action and education we've witnessed in Mexico work in U.S. culture?

The memory of our experience is already beginning to fade, the sense of urgency lessening. How do we find realistic ways of sustaining our commitment, of communicating to others that "global interdependence" is not just a trendy phrase?

It's confusing, it's frustrating, it's more than a little intimidating. We're only mildly comforted by a Les Huth reminder: "There can be no significant learning without a reasonable degree of apprehension." □

Mary-Clarie Uselding, former director of college relations at Wartburg, now resides in Toledo, Ohio.

Increasing global awareness goal of college plan

Wartburg's Decade of Opportunity, a ten-year plan, commits the college to promoting off-campus faculty study opportunities as one way of increasing global awareness among the entire college community.

Specific encouragement for a seminar in Mexico came from the Dell Association for Peace and Justice. The college will support a second seminar in 1990-91.

1989-90 participants included:

- Kimberly Folkers, assistant professor of marketing
- Arthur Frick, professor of art and department chair
- Dr. Leslie Huth, associate professor of education and department chair
- Dr. Melvin Kramer, professor of business administration and economics
- Dr. Terrence Lindell, associate professor of history and department chair
- Dorothy ("D.D.") Starr, associate professor of social work and department chair
- Larry Trachte, campus pastor and assistant professor of religion
- Mary-Claire Uselding, then director of college relations
- Dr. August Waltmann, professor of mathematics
- Dr. Darold Wolff, professor of biology and department chair

Like parents everywhere, Heladio and Onesima Reyes (far right and far left) tell us they want their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to have more than they've had. They're proud of the fact that all their children finished sixth grade. Second from left is Heladio's mother, Marcaria, 92, who speaks only Nahuatl. She was 12 years old at the time of the revolution, when her father married her off to keep her from being raped by the soldiers.

Sam

THE PERSON... THE PROF...

by Duane Schroeder

Officially, he is Wartburg's Professor of the Year for 1989-90. Unofficially, he has been Wartburg's Humanitarian of the past two-and-a-half decades.

He may be one of the thinnest persons to ever teach at Wartburg, and he insists he is the best looking, demonstrating his fine sense of humor, which at least partially explains why students chose Sam Michaelson to be the first recipient of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award.

"When I was in Germany, I attended a banquet at which two German ladies who didn't realize that I understood the language were discussing me. One said to the other, 'When he closes one eye, he looks like a needle,' to which I responded in German, 'and when I drink tomato juice, I look like a thermometer.' That was the way he introduced himself when he joined the Wartburg English faculty in 1966, a department he chaired for eight years through 1985-86, and he has been keeping students and colleagues entertained ever since.

Michaelson has been a nominee for the Professor of the Year award nearly every year since its inception, but he says that other than his sense of humor, he doesn't know why.

"I try to keep my classes

Professor of the Year Sam Michaelson makes literature contemporary by having students ask the questions.

provocative," he says, "and I try to draw out what is in the students. I'm not there to hand out information. I try to make literature contemporary by having students ask the questions. If it's handled right, students can see themselves reflected in literature."

The too-modest Michaelson has been an innovator in the classroom, developing and implementing such programs as English for international students, the interdisciplinary course in Human Expression, courses in film and film-making and a May Term course, Arts in the City, that took students to San Francisco and Toronto. He was a key figure in the college's now-defunct Honor Program.

In addition to his teaching qualities, Michaelson's greatest mark on Wartburg and its students has been his sense of humanitarianism, a sense, developed in large part by one of the bloodiest events in world history—World War II.

"I saw things that couldn't possibly fit into a young, impressionable mind from Western Minnesota," he remembers. "Absolutely nothing fit. That's why I chose philosophy as a major when I returned to college (Augsburg in Minneapolis). Philosophy leads naturally to literature, although music and literature have always been a part of my life, even as a youngster.

"Life was considerably different before the war. It seemed that people in small towns like Montevideo (his hometown) appreciated academics as well as sports. We had some wonderful singers in town. In fact, two were professional opera singers who had returned to the Midwest, and I was lucky enough to be their accompanist. And you can see the kind of sacrifice my parents made for me. For three years, they allowed me to drive 130 miles one way to Minneapolis every Saturday to take piano lessons."

His love and talent for music became a part of his livelihood as he served as church organist at St. Luke's Lutheran Church in Minneapolis, gave private piano lessons and taught church music at Augsburg on a part-time basis for 20 years.

But it is the war that Michaelson returns to again and again in describing the forces that shaped his life.

"It had to influence me more than anything else in my life. I was shooting at people I would normally drink coffee with. I could speak the language, so I could tell the difference between a German and a Nazi. There was a big difference. We weren't supposed to fraternize with the Germans, but we did with families. One family I visited with demonstrated great courage by hiding Jews from the Nazis throughout the war."

Immediately following the war, Michaelson stayed in Germany serving as an organist at the headquarters of the European Theatre of Operations and working for a Lutheran chaplain, which gave him access to transportation. On his own, he began visiting displaced persons in the internment camps who were desperate for information about their families. Because there was no other refugee service available and because of his mobility, he took it upon himself to see what he could do for these people.

"One of the most rewarding experiences of my life was to be able to reunite families," he said, "and I was able to get about a dozen back together."

He returned to Minneapolis in 1946 and graduated from Augsburg in 1950, but he and his wife, Marilyn '75, now the college's chief console operator and employee at the bookstore, were soon to return to the Continent.

"We received a call from George Spindt, who had worked with the Lutheran Refugee Service in the United States, and he asked if we would like to return to Germany to work with displaced persons. We did for a little more than a year and were in charge of the Lutheran Refugee Services for Wurttemburg-Baden and Hesse."

After finishing in Germany, Sam enrolled in Augsburg Seminary and graduate school at the University of Minnesota and took courses at both simultaneously, until 1953 at the seminary and 1956 at the university. He then had to make a choice—finish his degree or help with more refugees. Work with the displaced never stopped in Minneapolis or in Waverly, first with Baltics and then with Vietnamese. He and Marilyn spent the summer of 1975 at Indiantown Gap in Pennsylvania working with the Vietnamese, and that carried over to Waverly and Wartburg.

He led a movement in the community to sponsor Vietnamese families, and because of his efforts, Wartburg became the first college to sponsor Vietnamese students. He obtained immediate approval from the late Dr. John Chellevold, then dean of the faculty, to bring the first group of seven students to the campus despite a severe language barrier. That first group of seven was only the seed for the 54 who eventually attended Wartburg.

Michaelson then initiated English courses for the refugee students, which eventually evolved into the English as a Second Language program. Beneficial to all international students at the college, the program led to Wartburg's becoming the first Iowa college to be an accredited member of the American Association of Intensive English Programs. Needless to say, one of his biggest followings continues to be Wartburg's growing group of international students.

There were two other groups of students who were somewhat out of the mainstream that Michaelson touched deeply in the '60s and '70s—those who started experimenting with drugs and the Vietnam War resisters.

"I became interested in the drug culture because I have three boys of my own and I didn't want them to get involved. (Charles '77, is now with West Music Co. in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and an accompanist for the Old Creamery Theatre in Garrison, Iowa; Rob '80, is a surgeon with U.S. Air Force at Whiteman Air Force Base near Kansas City, Mo.; and Rick '86, is completing his residency in psychiatry at Iowa City.).

"Because Dr. K.D. Briner '61 (then also a member of the English department and now a public defender in Waterloo, Iowa) and I took an interest in them, the students who got in trouble would call us, and we would try to talk them down. I would guess that for almost five years I didn't get a full night's sleep."

Michaelson, Briner and Dr. P.A. Kildahl, professor emeritus of English, another World War II veteran who was chair of the department at the time, also were among those faculty who took the frequently unpopular stand of defending those who protested the draft and the Vietnam War.

"Kildahl and I had such revulsion toward war as the result of our World War II experiences that we felt compelled to make a statement," Michaelson explains. "Because we were veterans supporting the anti-war movement among the students, we were pointing out that not all dissenters were just hippies, and it would be pretty hard to call us communists."

A former student, Dr. William Hamm '66, now president of Waldorf College, Forest City, Iowa, spoke for the literally hundreds of young people touched by Sam when he wrote, "This most recent recognition of what many of 'us fans' have known for years is really satisfying. It's neat to see your unique collection of human qualities recognized in this formal way by colleagues and students at Wartburg. It says to me that the special character I continue to prize at my beloved Wartburg is still present and vibrant." □

Travelers observe new spirit in

EUROPE

Editor's Note: President Robert Vogel and Campus Pastor Larry Trachte were both in Europe this summer and were eyewitnesses to the historic changes taking place in Germany and the rest of the Eastern bloc countries.

Vogel was on a three-week study tour of the Soviet Union, Poland and East Germany with other Lutheran college officials. It was his fourth visit to East Germany since 1976. The program was sponsored by the Lutheran Educational Conference of North America to promote the internationalization of Lutheran higher education.

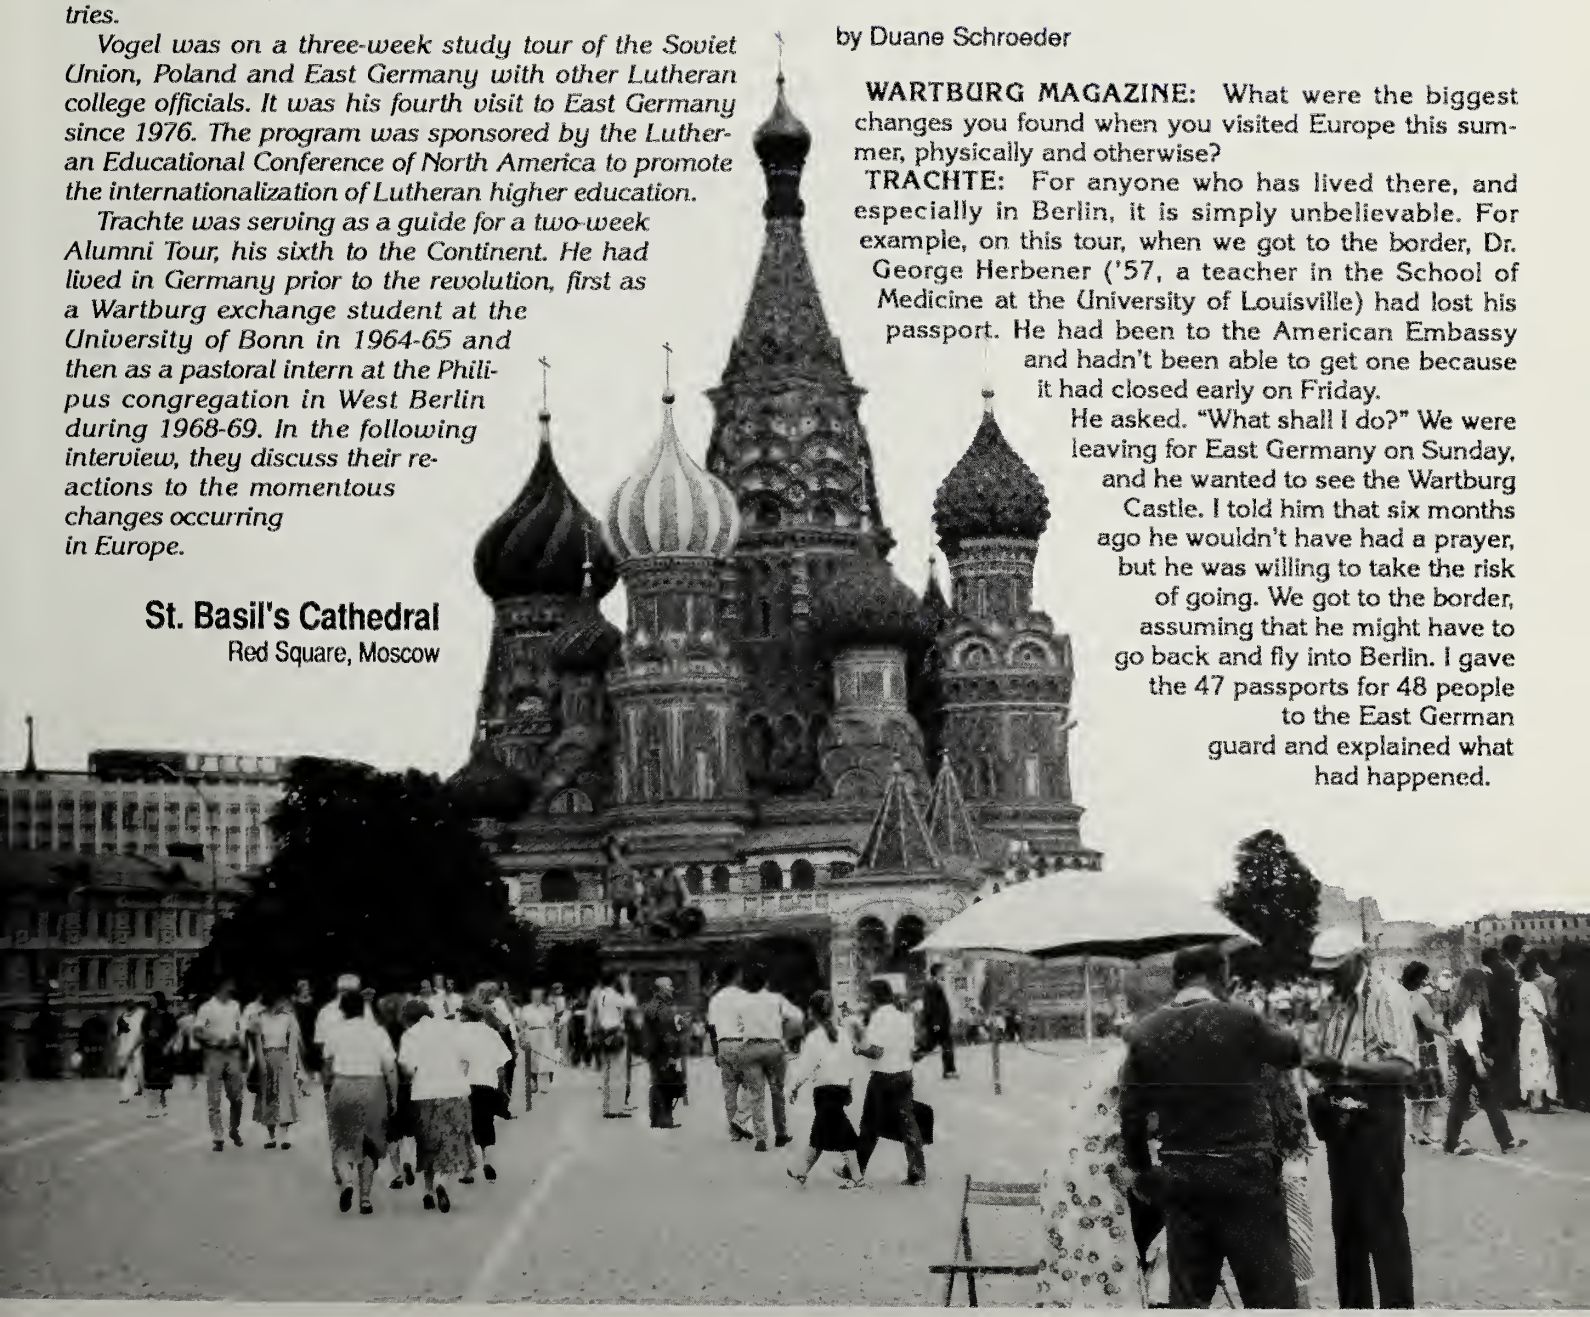
Trachte was serving as a guide for a two-week Alumni Tour, his sixth to the Continent. He had lived in Germany prior to the revolution, first as a Wartburg exchange student at the University of Bonn in 1964-65 and then as a pastoral intern at the Philipus congregation in West Berlin during 1968-69. In the following interview, they discuss their reactions to the momentous changes occurring in Europe.

by Duane Schroeder

WARTBURG MAGAZINE: What were the biggest changes you found when you visited Europe this summer, physically and otherwise?

TRACHTE: For anyone who has lived there, and especially in Berlin, it is simply unbelievable. For example, on this tour, when we got to the border, Dr. George Herbener ('57, a teacher in the School of Medicine at the University of Louisville) had lost his passport. He had been to the American Embassy and hadn't been able to get one because it had closed early on Friday.

He asked, "What shall I do?" We were leaving for East Germany on Sunday, and he wanted to see the Wartburg Castle. I told him that six months ago he wouldn't have had a prayer, but he was willing to take the risk of going. We got to the border, assuming that he might have to go back and fly into Berlin. I gave the 47 passports for 48 people to the East German guard and explained what had happened.



St. Basil's Cathedral
Red Square, Moscow

The guard asked if George had a driver's license. He looked at the picture on the license, looked at George and said that would cost 10 marks or about $6. We went through.

The women (on the tour) started having their pictures taken with the East German border guards. After about five minutes of this, I said something to the guard about our visas. He said, "Can't you see I'm busy taking pictures with the women?" The tone was happy. They joked with us where before it was complete intimidation.

To cross the border or to walk across Checkpoint Charlie (in Berlin) and not be stopped or to see the traffic flowing through the Brandenburg Gate and see East and West German guards smoking cigarettes together is almost incomprehensible.

VOGEL: It is unbelievable. We had similar experiences at borders. Last year on June 17, I stood on the West Berlin side of the Brandenburg Gate and watched as West Berliners floated balloons in memory of the worker uprising that had been put down so violently in the '50s. They wanted East Berliners to know they had not forgotten.

Who would think a year later you could stand on the other side of the Brandenburg Gate and watch people casually walking back and forth through the two cities.

We had a situation entering Poland where the daughter of one of the presidents, a high school student who was living in Russia for a year, did not have her visa in order. We felt she would surely be sent back to Berlin. The military people were asking her to get her things together and get off the train. But a representative of the government tourist bureau stepped in and said, "Well, we can work something out." And it was all straightened out when we got to Warsaw.

MAGAZINE: What about people you knew from previous visits to Europe. How have their attitudes changed?

TRACHTE: My supervising pastor, who has lived in Berlin almost all his life and is nearly 90 years old, wrote in a Christmas letter that he thought he would never live to see the day when Berlin would once again be one. A pastor at the church in Wittenburg was very excited about the potential for his children to travel. There is some real excitement, but it has had its cost. The pastor was just out of the hospital because he has stomach ulcers and other problems caused by the tremendous strain and stress of the last year. There are some real apprehensions about how this is all going to work.

MAGAZINE: President Vogel, you visited with a number of clergy on your trip and found that they are playing a major role in the transition.

VOGEL: It should not be surprising to discover that there were only two systems in East Germany where real leadership was being developed: the party system, which is now discredited, and the church. Now, in the transition, pastors and church officials are being asked to give leadership. Their integrity was established during the long struggle by the church and particularly in the recent protest movements.

The pastor of St. Nicholas Church in Leipzig was elected first to the city council, a large body of 100 or so people, and then the council elected him president. He told us the council had hired a city manager from Hanover (in the West). He said there was no one in Leipzig who knew how to run a city.

On the other hand, many clergy are concerned that the agenda developed by the East German church over the last two decades will be totally lost. Most of the attention now is focused on the market and the economic opportunities and changes. Young people want life the way they see it in the West.

The church had developed three issues: social justice, peace with reconciliation and, most recently, the environment. One of the most haunting phrases that I remember is a pastor saying, "We have learned to live more simply. We learned to live with less, and we believe there is value in that. Will that all be lost?" West Germany is essentially buying up East Germany.

TRACHTE: Our German students here expressed the same concern. They were dismayed at the early election results of the East, which were very conservative and seemed to say they are going to approve the agenda of the West.

We in the West have assumed that capitalism and Christianity go hand-in-hand, when in fact the Third World and East bloc theology has contributed much by saying Christianity is above and beyond systems and that living solely for personal gain is not congruent with the deeper values of Christian life. There also is a concern for the anarchy that is coming in the East. The tone is, "We want everything we've been deprived of all these years, and we want it now"; it's really a belligerent tone.

VOGEL: The other amazing thing is that the revolution has been essentially bloodless, and again it is the church that is credited. A pastor of a large church in Dresden was called out to help cool a potentially violent situation at the train station after the Czech border was closed. The riot police had been called out. It was the first time they had seen riot police and all their gear.

The pastor had the respect and integrity needed to defuse the situation. Through the church, the confrontation was turned into dialogue. During the early days of the unrest, the only place where you could meet and talk freely was in the churches.

The bishop of Saxony is credited with working behind the scenes to help the head of state understand that dialogue was a better way than bloodshed. It was the breakthrough that kept it all nonviolent.

TRACHTE: It was at these dialogues that the stories were told. What is happening in your factory? What's happening in the government position? All the stories of corruption. I think they all knew it, but no one dared say it publicly before. Everybody knew that you often had to pay something under the table, and that if you joined the party, you got certain perks. All this came out in the dialogues. One by one, people told their stories of bribery and corruption and false reporting. Everything was rotten to the core.

MAGAZINE: Was the corruption the underlying reason for the entire revolution?

VOGEL: Much of the anger was in discovering that their leaders were living lavishly and far above the living standard of the common people. The leaders said, "We must sacrifice for the sake of our country, for the welfare of all people." It was a lie. Exposed to the light of day, they saw that the whole system was corrupt.

And now an irony. We were in Lobetal, a village for the handicapped, where a pastor had invited Honecker (former head of state Erich Honecker) and his wife to take refuge during the time when there was serious question whether he would be executed or face some other kind of retribution. The irony comes in the fact that the pastor and his wife had 10 children, and none of them could go to the university because of an ordinance established by the Ministry of Education that excluded students who had gone through confirmation from the university. The Minister of Education was Mrs. Honecker. Yet, this pastor's family had provided them a safe house. Once again, it was the church being the church in the midst of change.

MAGAZINE: How difficult will it be for the East Europeans, including

Sights and sounds of Eastern Europe include (clockwise from left) the square in Old Town Warsaw, Poland; changing of the guard at Lenin's Tomb, Moscow; and camaraderie between Wartburg tourists and East German border guards, something unheard of just a few months ago. the Poles and Russians, to adjust to a new economic system after being taken care of from birth to death?

VOGEL: We heard a Pole say that to live in a communist system is to live in a zoo. You're restricted, but they bring you food every day. To live in a capitalistic system is to live in the jungle. There's lots of food out there, but you have to go find it. You can understand why the Pole said some may think it is not so bad to live in a zoo.

In Russia, the oldest living people only remember Czars, Bolsheviks and communists. There is no history of a free market, so I think it is going to be harder to make the changes in Russia than in other places. The Poles, interestingly enough, take some pride in the fact that they started it all with Solidarity and the labor movement. We asked how long the Poles would be patient to see some marked improvement in their lives. Some said, "Oh, five years. Maybe 10."

As Trachte said, it's going to happen faster in East Germany. In Poland, the government was smart enough to establish currency at the street value. We didn't have people approaching us to exchange currency as we did in Russia. But they have faced substantial inflation.

There are other concerns in Poland. They are worried that some of the old labels that were very much a part of pre-World War II life are resurfacing. "You are a Jew. You are a German." To be Lutheran is to be considered German. The other overwhelming impression in Russia was how totally corrupt the old system was. We found no energy for doing anything well except for the black market. Otherwise, there's no incentive.

One young man said, "Our problem is that we've got a system that's been corrupt and leadership with no reason to want change because it threatens their positions." They have had massive underemployment. This was the safety net. They just paid people for doing little or nothing. Rent and food prices were controlled. We saw apartment buildings that were not occupied because income from the fixed rent was not adequate to maintain the building.

TRACHTE: I do think the Germans are tremendously resilient, and they're going to do it faster than most people realize. The German Mark has gained strength, which indicates the rest of Europe believes it too. But, it is going to be a tremendous adjustment, and they were already talking about a transition period when we were there. A high percentage of East Germans are unemployed because all their factories are being closed down.

So, the question is how fast the transition is going to occur. The West Germans are in there, and there are already laws in place to prevent them from literally buying East Germany. They see tremendous potential. It is a matter of how fast West German industry moves in and starts employing these people.

Remember, the East Germans lived for 40 years under socialism and from 1933 to 1945 under Hitler, so none of them have experienced the kind of environment West Germany is going to bring.

MAGAZINE: Are the Poles or Russians or the rest of Europe nervous about the reunification of Germany?

VOGEL: I think there is concern in Europe about reunification. You just have to recount a bit of history to understand why. Russians talk of the devastation caused by German troops. Of course, there are stories about the Russians as well. And then you're in Dresden and you look at a city that was wiped out in one night by Allied bombing.

TRACHTE: I had a long conversation with our Czech guide. He says the Czechs are not afraid of Germany today. In fact, they are happy that Germany is being united because there is a new spirit in Europe. People today are talking about one Europe. He felt that the freedom of East Germany and its incorporation into the West can only have positive effects on Eastern bloc countries. And he liked the idea that it would be in NATO. He thought that Germany and NATO together cement Europe into a web. Our German bus driver felt the same way. He really feels the new spirit of a unified Germany is one of economic and European cooperation. I found less fear of the Germans than one might have expected. □

Dick Walker knew and loved and travelled the back roads of Iowa. The country roads, the blacktops. One of the first Walker stories I heard on this campus was that Marv Ott wouldn't ride shotgun any longer with Dick to high school wrestling meets, out-of-town ball games and on recruiting trips because he was tired of opening and closing gates.

What bitter irony that Dick Walker died on a country road.

A television reporter who was talking with students and staff and faculty on campus on Tuesday asked in wonderment: How did a wrestling coach have such a broad and important impact on this community? Well, he was a teacher. Dick was starting his 23rd year of teaching here. He personally taught hundreds, thousands of students over those years. And many of his students are here. There is something special about the relationships that teachers have with their students. Those relationships are some of the highest rewards in teaching. And Dick was a good teacher.

He was an outstanding coach, and wrestling was his passion. There is a bonding, a deep bonding, between coach and athlete. There was that bonding between Dick and the "young men" in his program — as in, "There is a young man from Northwest Iowa who will probably wrestle at 157 for us," or as in one of those rare ad hoc conferences called to talk about the classroom performance or behavior of one of his wrestlers when he would say, "The young man obviously didn't handle this situation in the appropriate manner." His "young men" are here today. And coaches, and representatives from Iowa Conference schools and across the state and beyond, they are here.

There isn't an academic department or building on this campus where people weren't crying on Tuesday morning. Dick was a colleague and friend to all of us.

And townspeople. Coffee in the mornings. Over the years, City Council and Parks and Recreation and service clubs. And his continuing contacts with Waterloo childhood and family friends. And the Wartburg College Board of Regents. We've come today from all over — Florida to California, Texas to North Dakota.

We see more clearly today, together, the full measure of the man. Together we pay tribute to Dick, a person of stature in every dimension of his life. We express to his beloved "Mrs. Walker," Shirley, and the family our gratitude for Dick. We thank them and God for his life among us and his special contributions to this place and this community.

There is a reminder to us in this moment as we look around us. We ought not wait for funerals to tell people how much we love them, respect them or appreciate them.

Through his life and service, Dick Walker has an irrevocable place in the ongoing saga of Wartburg College.

Athletes win recognition for classroom performance

Wartburg athletes proved during the 1989-90 sports seasons that the college's athletic department pays more than just lip service to academics.

Eight athletes were cited for their academic achievements. Three athletes were designated as GTE Academic All-Americans, and three others were Academic All-District 7 as selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA). In addition, three athletes won other national academic designations.

SPORTS

"These awards are an indication not only of our coaches putting emphasis on academics, but also of the efforts of the rest of the faculty," said Athletic Director John Kurtt. "Recognition of these individuals enhances a Wartburg athletic tradition and should encourage other athletes to put forth that same kind of effort."

All-Americans were Dan Nettleton of Algona, Iowa, first team in men's basketball; Shon Cook of Strawberry Point, Iowa, third team in softball; and Brad Thompson of Randall, Iowa, second team in the At-Large category, which covers athletes from cross country/track, fencing, field hockey, golf, gymnastics, ice hockey, lacrosse, riflery, skiing, soccer, swimming, tennis, volleyball, water polo and wrestling.

The District 7 awards are for athletes from Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming and the Canadian provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, as well as Iowa.

In order to be eligible for consideration for the GTE Academic All-American teams, athletes must first be on the first All-District team. Members of the second and third All-District teams are not eligible. The student-athletes must be starters or important reserves and carry at least a 3.2 cumulative grade point average (on a 4.0 basis) for their entire collegiate career. Candidates must also have sophomore academic status.

Making the All-District first team were the three All-Americans plus Kyle Kreinbring of Preston, Iowa, in football and Todd Reinhardt of Waverly in basketball. Todd Houge of Manly, Iowa, was named to the At-Large third All-District team.

Reinhardt was also one of 20 golfers in Division III of the NCAA named All-America Scholars by the Golf Coaches Association of America. Criteria for this award include an overall grade point average of at least 3.0 on a 4.0 basis, junior or senior academic status, play in 75 percent of the college's regularly scheduled competitive golf rounds and a stroke average under 80.

Reinhardt had a 3.42 grade point average as a business finance major and a 74 stroke average on the golf course. In basketball, he led the Knights with an 18.0 average. He also led Division III nationally in free throw percentage with 92.9 (91 of 98).

A second golfer, Stephanie Reinert of Durant, Iowa, was one of 39 student-athletes in the nation, Division I and II as well as III, designated as a Wilson Academic All-American. She was selected by the National Golf Coaches Association after posting a 3.709 grade point average in biology and physical therapy and averaging 88 strokes per 18 holes. Her average qualified her for the national NCAA Division III tournament for the second time in her three years of competition.

The final athlete to win academic accolades was Dave Bergman of Waverly, who was cited as a Volvo Tennis Scholar-Athlete by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association. He posted a 3.73 grade point average in his double major of mathematics and business administration with a concentration in finance. On the court, he was 10-7 at number six singles and 13-9 at number three doubles, and he placed second at both flights in the Iowa Conference tournament.

Nettleton, who starts at forward for the Knights, averaged 14.5 points for coach Buzz Levick and shot 61.6 percent from the floor, which put him among the nation's leaders in Division III. In the classroom, he is a mathematics major and has a near-perfect 3.98 grade point average.

Cook, who is the second Wartburg softball player to win Academic All-American status, posted an 8-7 won-loss mark last spring with a school-record ERA of 0.83 in 101 innings. She also had a school-record 68 strikeouts for the season with just 15 walks. She has a 3.895 GPA in her double major of psychology and political science.

Thompson has made his mark at Wartburg in a variety of ways. In addition to being a standout in cross country, track and the classroom, he served last year as Student Body President and this year is Student Body Vice President. He won All-Iowa Conference honors in cross country by placing seventh among all individuals last fall and would have competed in the IIAC track meet but was in Egypt for a May Term course.

As a sophomore, he was 10th in the IIAC in cross country and was a member of the national qualifying cross country team, which finished 13th in the nation. He also placed fourth in the 3000 meter steeplechase at the 1988 IIAC track meet. He is the captain of this year's cross country team. In the classroom, he has a 3.96 GPA in business administration.

Kreinbring was first team All-IIAC in football after leading the Knights as a defensive back with seven interceptions and 89 tackles. He is a biology major and has a 3.66 GPA.

Houge, as a junior this year, is the youngest of the honorees. His GPA is 3.97 in mathematics and business finance. Like Thompson, he is a distance runner and last spring placed 6th in the 10,000 meter event at the conference track meet. He also has two letters in cross country.

Wartburg can now boast of 18 GTE Academic All-Americans since the first selections in 1972. With all eight of last year's honorees back in the classroom, that list could grow considerably in 1990-91.

Brad Thompson also sets the pace in the classroom and in student government.

New coach for volleyball, softball

Robin Kay Baker, who was softball coach at North Kossuth High School in Swea City last spring and completed an M.S. degree at St. Cloud State University in Minnesota this summer, is the new head volleyball and softball coach at Wartburg.

She also manages the Physical Education Center and is an instructor of physical education.

She replaces Janet Vaughan, who had been softball coach for five years and volleyball coach for three. Vaughan married this past summer and left the area.

Baker was a graduate assistant in softball at St. Cloud State this past year, as well as softball coach at North Kossuth High School. She also worked with the basketball and swim programs, was a recruiter and did some administrative work.

She is a 1989 graduate of Augustana College, Sioux Falls, S.D., and was a student assistant with its volleyball team. She was twice named to the All-North Central Conference softball team and the All-Midwest Region softball team as a catcher.

Four spring teams place among IIAC's top four

Because of the reduction in the number of issues of the Wartburg Magazine printed each year, the review of the various sports seasons will be later than in the past.

Following is a brief rundown of the spring sports season:

MEN'S TRACK

The Knights placed sixth in the IIAC with 44 points. The only medal winners were Mike Schmidt of Holstein, Iowa, second in the javelin, Gabriel Moinjil of Malaysia, third in the discus, and Bob Howie of Monticello, Iowa, third in the 800 meter run.

MEN'S GOLF

The Knights tied Buena Vista for second in the IIAC tournament, each shooting a 618, 20 strokes behind champion Central. Three players won All-IIAC medals by placing in the top 10: Andy Ott of Waverly tied for third at 149, Todd Reinhardt of Waverly, sixth with a 152, and Matt Matthias of Norwalk, Iowa, tied for ninth at 154.

BASEBALL

The Knights were 12-19 in all games and 10-10 in the IIAC, finishing in a three-way tie for fourth with Buena Vista and Central. Three players were named All-IIAC: third baseman Mike Horsfield of Epworth, Iowa, on the first team and outfielder Eric Wessels of Onalaska, Wis., and catcher Matt Petersen of Grand Mound, Iowa, on the second team.

WOMEN'S TRACK

Wartburg placed fourth with 109.5 points. The Knights had no individual champions but did win five second-place medals: Jane Deike of Fort Wayne, Ind., in the discus; Kris Bouman of Dike, Iowa, in the high jump; Merilee Paulson of Belvidere, Ill., in the triple jump; Angie Pitz of Epworth, Iowa, in the 5,000 meter run; and Angie Heilmann of Blue Grass, Iowa, in the 400 meter hurdles. Paulson also won a third place medal in the long jump, as did Sue Chapman of Tipton, Iowa, in the 100 meter hurdles.

MEN'S TENNIS

Wartburg finished second in the IIAC tennis tournament for the second straight year with 72 points, 16 behind Luther. Corey Halverson of Mondovi, Wis., was the third flight champion for the Knights. The remaining singles players all placed second: Mark Bradley of Dubuque, Iowa, in the first flight; Brian Jarchow of Oelwein, Iowa, in the second flight; Andy Knoernschild of Muscatine, Iowa, in the fourth flight; Jon Stadtmueller of Seguin, Tex., in the fifth flight; and Dave Bergman of Waverly in the sixth flight. The number one doubles team of Bradley and Jarchow and the number three doubles team of Bergman and Stadtmueller also were second.

SOFTBALL

The Knights were 16-15 in all games, 9-7 in the Iowa Conference, which earned Janet Vaughan's team fifth place. Outfielder Malea Jensen of Spencer, Iowa, led the Knights at the plate with a .333 average and was put on the second All-IIAC team, the only Wartburg player selected.

Team sets six records

Wartburg's softball team set six school records, primarily in pitching and fielding, and finished fifth in the Iowa Conference. The league had three teams selected for post-season play and is regarded by many as one of the strongest softball leagues in Division III.

Due to a mechanical malfunction, the following class years were omitted from the Spring issue of Wartburg Magazine: 1963, 1965, 1967, 1970, 1981, 1987.

33 Wilko Schoenbohm, Minneapolis, executive vice president of the Courage Foundation, had a garden dedicated in his honor on the Courage Center campus in Golden Valley, Minn. He founded the center in 1952 and was executive director until his retirement in 1983.

36 The Rev. Arnold Jahr, Waverly, is the author of Adjacent Wilderness, a book about the Bellevue War. He and his wife, Lillian, visited Bellevue, Iowa, for the 150th anniversary reenactment of the bloody frontier gun battle. He was the guest of honor and presented the local library with the original manuscript that was written 37 years ago.

Three Alumni Citations awarded

Three Wartburg alumni were cited for their professional and vocational achievements at Homecoming this fall.

They are Dr. Oscar T. Lenning '64, executive vice president and dean for academic affairs at Waldorf College, Forest City, Iowa; Dr. Norman P. Melchert '55, chairperson of the department of philosophy at Lehigh University, Easton, Pa.; and Dr. Duane S. Schlitter '65, curator of mammals at the Carnegie Museum of Natural History in Pittsburgh.

They received Alumni Citations. Awarded annually by the Wartburg Alumni Association, the citations recognize contributions to and support of the college, church and community, as well as professional and vocational achievement.

Lenning is nationally recognized as a senior scholar in the field of higher education and is the author of more than 75 major publications. He is included on such lists as Who's Who in the East, Who's Who in the West, International Who's Who in Community Service, Men of Achievement and Notable Americans.

He has served as a consultant to dozens of colleges and universities, six states, three national church college systems, the Education Commission of the States, the Federal Interagency Committee on Education and the Netherlands Ministry of Education. He has also served on three national task forces dealing with education.

Prior to joining Waldorf in 1988, he was vice president for academic affairs and dean of the faculty at Roberts Wesleyan College in Rochester, N.Y.

He did his postgraduate study at the University of Iowa, completing his Ph.D. in 1969.

Melchert, who has been at Lehigh since 1962, recently received the R.R. and E.C. Hillman Award for "having done the most toward advancing the interests of the university."

He is recognized as a noted philosophy teacher and has established a number of traditions that make his department and courses among the more popular with students and faculty at Lehigh.

He recently spent a sabbatical year at the University of Kent in Cambridge, England, lecturing and writing an introductory book on philosophy, which was published this fall.

After earning his B.D. degree at Philadelphia Lutheran Seminary in 1958, he completed his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Pennsylvania.

Schlitter has been with the Carnegie Museum of Natural History since 1973, first as associate curator of mammals and now as curator of mammals and head of the section on mammals. He previously was a research assistant on an African mammal project at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

He has done field research in the United States, Africa, Asia and Europe and has research interests in the systematics, biogeography and ecology of small mammals of Africa, southern Asia and Australia and the systematics and evolutionary relationships of small mammals of the eastern United States.

He earned his M.A. degree at the University of Kansas and his doctorate at the University of Maryland.

Tower Club recognizes donors from June to December of 1989

In 1989, Wartburg switched to the calendar year for purposes of donor recognition. Tower Club donors who made gifts from Jan. 1 to May 31, 1989, were listed in the President's Report mailed in October 1989. The following lists include donors who made gifts to the college from June 1 to Dec. 31, 1989, qualifying them for membership in the Tower Club for last year. Our sincere thanks to all members of the Tower Club for their generous support in 1989.

* Company matching gift funds were received in addition to the donor's contribution.

Ensembles from the Wartburg Choir entertain at the popular Christmas Carol Dinner, which is held in the Student Union following the performance at Wartburg on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 2. Tickets are $10 per person. The event usually sells out in early November.

An identical menu will be served at a Candlelight Dinner preceding the Cedar Falls performance on Friday, Nov. 30. The meal begins at 6:15 p.m. in Bethel Hall of Nazareth Lutheran Church. Dr. Herman Diers, narrator of the Christmas With Wartburg program, will provide diners with background on this year's production, explaining how the musical selections and Scripture readings relate to the theme. Tickets are $12 per person.

Direct inquiries for tickets to performances and dinners to the Wartburg Visitors Center, (319) 352-2826.
